The Chicago Documentation System

Dr. Karen Petit
Documentation explains where borrowed words, statistics, ideas, pictures, charts, music, and other items came from.
Without documentation, readers and listeners will not know:

- Which words in the paper are Teddy’s?
- Which ideas are Teddy’s?
- Which words came from a book?
- Did the picture of the flower come from a Web site, a painting, or Teddy’s camera?
- Where can someone find more information from the same source?
- Are the statistics from a recent source?
- Who sang the song? Who composed the song?
- Was the song heard on a CD, at a concert, or on a Web site?
Source documentation is used while communicating borrowed words or ideas in quotations, paraphrases, and summaries.

Quotations
- Include Source Information
- Borrowed words
- Use quotation marks

Paraphrases
- Include Source Information
- Borrowed ideas
- Do not use quotation marks

Summaries
- Include Source Information
- Borrowed, condensed ideas
- Do not use quotation marks
A documentation system is used in research papers and other kinds of communication to describe the source(s) of borrowed information and words.

Documentation systems include:
- The Chicago (CMS), Turabian, or notes-bibliography system is often used in history and other fields.
Components of the Chicago System

For each borrowed word or idea, a superscript number is placed in the body of a paper.

Writing is an important academic and career skill. An article discusses how “the quality of your writing can determine success or failure.”

The superscript number connects to a footnote at the bottom of the page or to an endnote at the end of the paper.

Endnote

A bibliography page is sometimes done in addition to (or instead of) footnotes or endnote pages.

Bibliography pages use hanging indents and alphabetical order.

In reference to punctuation, bibliography entries have more periods and fewer commas than footnote and endnote entries.

Bibliography

To indicate a change from the writer of the research paper to one of the sources of information or words, a lead-in phrase is often used.

Unless the author’s words indicate otherwise, the superscript number shows readers the end of the source’s ideas/words, as well as the number of a footnote or endnote that contains information about the source.

The words following a citation can show a continuation of the same viewpoint or a change to a different viewpoint.

According to the National Commission on Writing, writing is important. A survey shows that writing is a “threshold skill” needed to get hired and promoted at work. Also, this survey shows . . . . In addition to being important at work, writing is also important in . . . .
Whenever a source reference is not present, a reader will assume that the idea and words are the research paper writer’s.

Incorrect source documentation often results in plagiarism:

Writing is a threshold skill for both employment and promotion purposes.

Revision should include checking for places where additional source information is needed.

This revision has a citation documenting the source of borrowed ideas and words:

In a survey of 120 large American companies, writing was found to be a “threshold skill” for both employment and promotion” purposes. ²
Strong communication skills are important in today’s professional careers. According to Jacobs, “Whether you are pitching a business case or justifying a budget, the quality of your writing can determine success or failure.”¹ Police officers, for example, need to record information, write reports, and sometimes showcase their written documents in a courtroom. A single ineffective communication could result in a criminal being found innocent of a crime. In a survey of 120 large American companies, writing was found to be a „threshold skill“ for both employment and promotion” purposes.² People in all of today’s careers need to be able to communicate effectively to interact appropriately with their colleagues, bosses, customers, and other people, as well as to communicate their knowledge and to showcase their accomplishments.

Good Organization while Citing Sources

- The organization of a paper or speech should be focused on the writer’s or the speaker’s ideas.
- The thesis and topic sentences should convey the writer’s or speaker’s main ideas, rather than being quotations from sources.
- Source material is most often used to support a writer’s or a speaker’s ideas.

\[\ldots\] Strong communication skills are important at work and in college.

When at work, an employee needs to be skillful in communication in order to successfully complete many tasks. For example, a person often has to write reports, send e-mails to colleagues, and speak with his/her boss. According to Jacobs, “[T]he quality of your writing can determine success or failure.”

Good communication is also important in college. \ldots
Correct Grammar When Using Source Material

Correct grammar, including correct sentence structures, is needed when using source material and citing sources. If the use of a quotation results in unclear writing or grammatical errors, then revision of the lead-in phrase is needed, or the writer/speaker can use a paraphrase or a summary instead.

Strong communication skills are important in today’s professional careers. According to Jacobs, “Whether you are pitching a business case or justifying a budget, the quality of your writing can determine success or failure.”

Revision

Jacobs states, “whether you are pitching a business case.”

Jacobs states that good writing can help when “pitching a business case.”
Bibliography Pages Include:
