

Charlotte King, DAOM

Charlotte King is a board certified and licensed doctor of acupuncture. She graduated from the New England School of Acupuncture in Newton, MA. While attending school, Charlotte studied Chinese, Japanese and orthopedic styles of acupuncture, and interned in Boston Medical Center's pediatric integrative medicine program. She has trained under specialists in sports medicine and orthopedics, women's health, mental health, addiction, and pediatrics. She currently practices at Emerging Energy Acupuncture, an East Asian medical clinic in Providence, RI as well as AdCare Substance Abuse Treatment Center in North Kingstown. Prior to her training as an acupuncturist, Charlotte earned a Bachelor's degree in Religious Studies, with a concentration in Anthropology from Eckerd College in St. Petersburg, FL. Through her education, as well as her own clinical and personal experience, Charlotte has cultivated a strong belief in the collaborative power of eastern and western medicines to help patients achieve optimal health.
